As we head into the school choice season at Denver Public Schools, we thought it was important to outline how we are supporting all our students at Asbury. As the Gifted and Talented teacher at Asbury, my job is to work with students that are identified as Gifted and Talented and students that are a or more year above grade level. Every week, I am able to meet with over 100 students in reading or math to provide challenging work and extensions for them. While working directly with students is a portion of my job, another large part of my job is to ensure that all students are being challenged and that our teachers have resources to ensure that our students are receiving rigorous instruction. At every grade level, I have been able to offer ideas, projects, extensions, stations, and lessons to help support our goal. We also frequently analyze students scores and if we feel like they would benefit from being in one of my groups we add them at any time.

If you have any questions, feel free to e-mail me susan\_eberspacher@dpsk12.org .

Sincerely,

Susan Eberspacher
